THE SODIUM SHAKE DOWN

STIFFENING OF ENDOTHELIAL CELLS

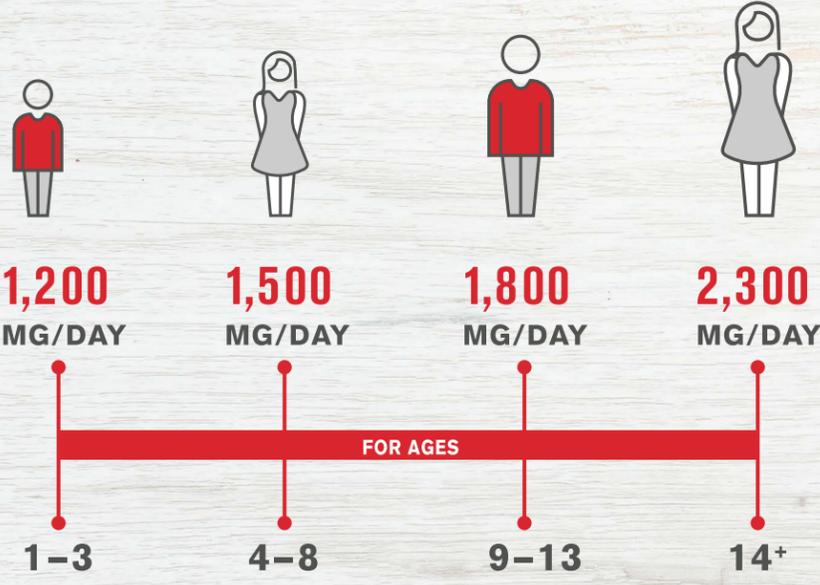

REACTIVE OXYGEN SPECIES PRODUCTION

Did You Know?

Too much sodium is linked to the stiffening of endothelial cells and an increase in reactive oxygen species production which can impair endothelial function, two avenues that may lead to the development of atherosclerosis.^{4,6}

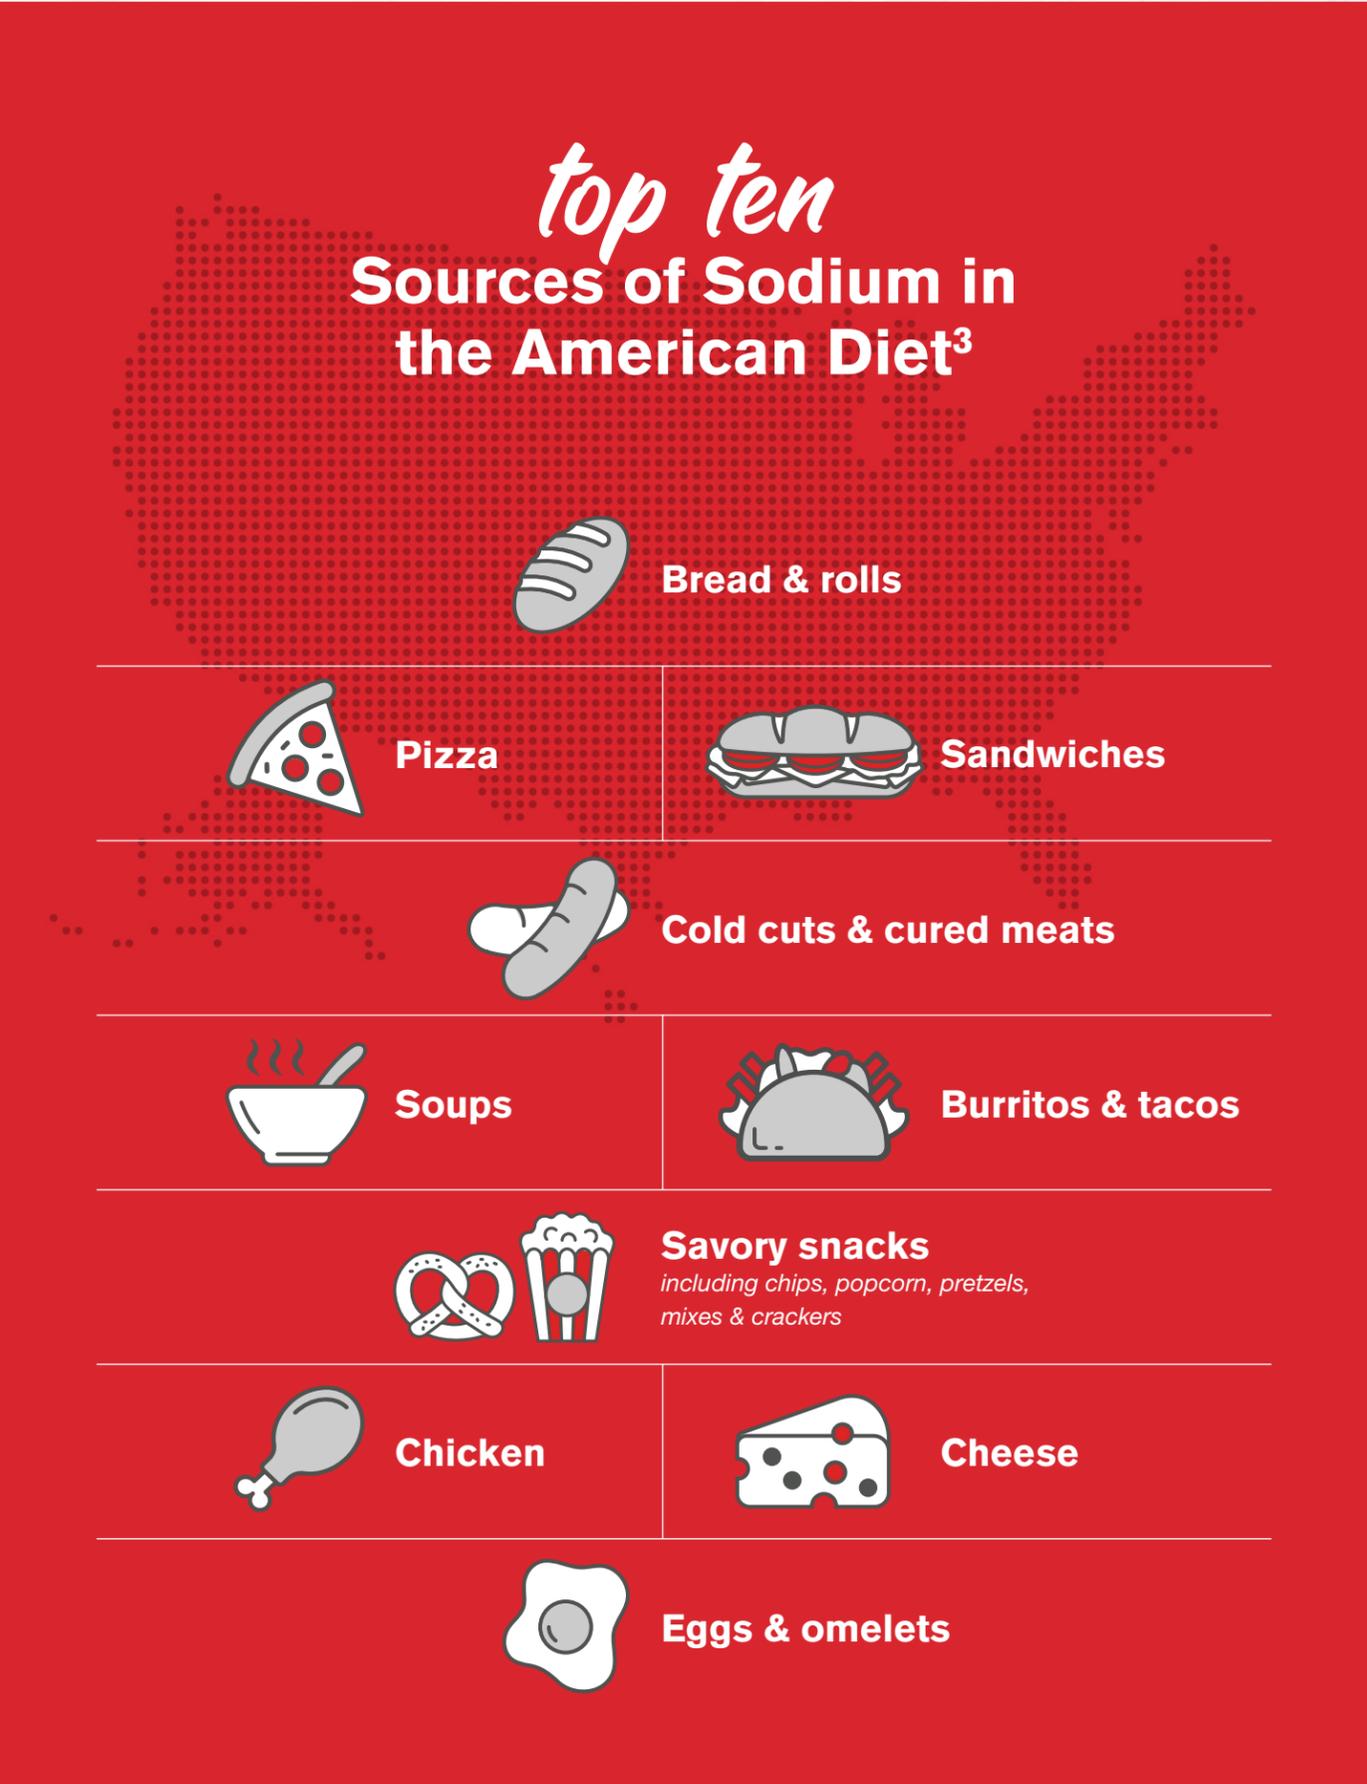

Sodium is an essential mineral regulated by the kidneys, and it helps control fluid balance, affects muscle function and helps the body send nerve impulses.¹ Although it's essential, people consume way too much sodium, with daily intakes for those age 1 and over averaging 3,393 mg per day.² Excess sodium can increase blood pressure and risk for heart disease and stroke. Together, heart disease and stroke kill more Americans each year than any other cause.³ High sodium intakes also increase the risk for kidney disease, osteoporosis, stomach cancer and more.⁴

The National Academy of Medicine established new sodium intake guidelines for Chronic Disease Risk Reduction (CDRR).^{2,4,5} These CDRR levels are based on the potential long-term benefits on blood pressure, risk of hypertension and cardiovascular disease:

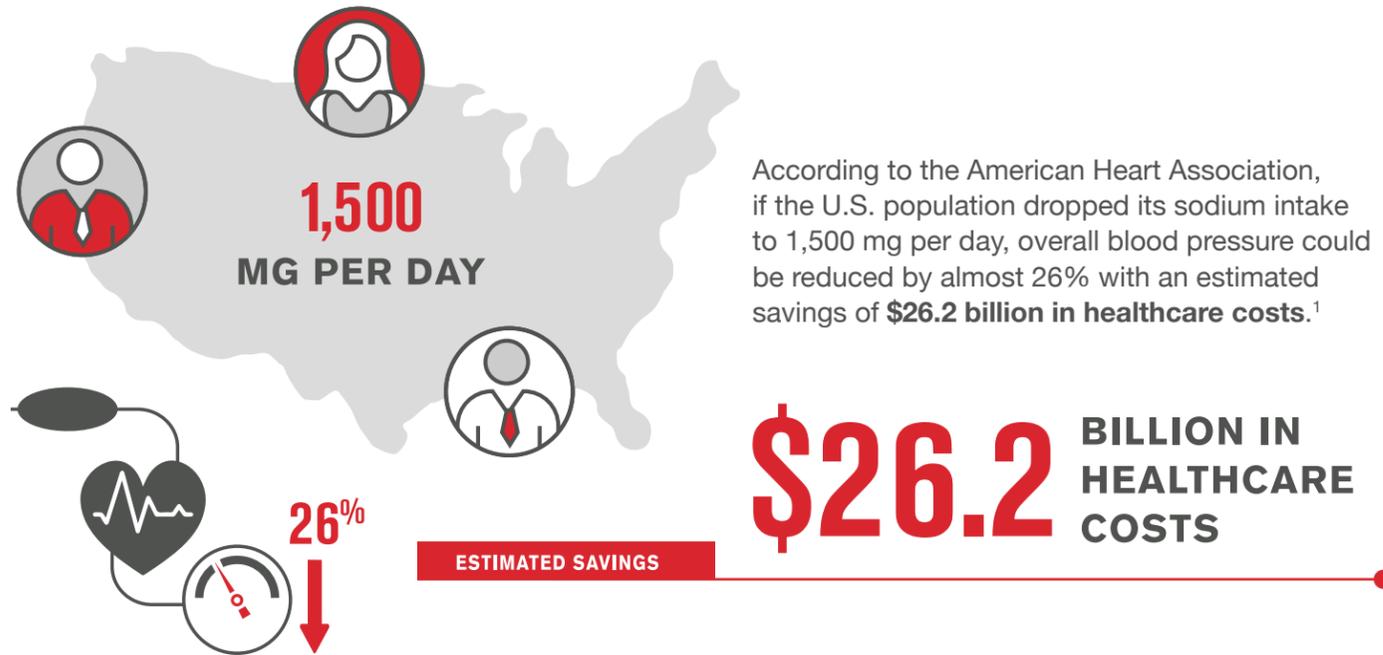

With 90% of adults projected to develop hypertension, cutting back on sodium intake is critical.³

Tips to Help Patients and Clients Limit Sneaky Sources of Sodium

- 1. Choose plain fresh or frozen vegetables, or low-sodium or no-salt-added canned vegetables.
- 2. For canned beans that contain regular amounts of sodium, rinse in a colander for 10 seconds and allow to drain for 2 minutes to reduce about 40% of the sodium content. For canned vegetables, the same method reduces sodium by 9 to 23%. Other types of canned foods can also be rinsed to remove some sodium.^{9,10,11}
- 3. For meat, choose fresh or frozen products. Skip brined, canned, smoked, cured or marinated.
- 4. Limit salty processed foods such as mixes, and “instant” products, including flavored rice and ready-made pasta mixes, and instead use plain pasta and plain rice and season with Dash seasoning blends.
- 5. Although sea salt and pink Himalayan salt offer a different flavor than table salt, they supply too much sodium and still need to be limited.^{1,12}
- 6. Some shellfish are naturally high in sodium, like clams and shrimp.¹³ Enjoy less frequently and season with garlic and seasoning blends, like Dash products.
- 7. When dining out or ordering take-out, review the nutrition facts online in advance. Make special requests to limit high-sodium items, like asking for no cheese or to leave sauce and dressings on the side so you can use sparingly.¹¹
- 8. Instead of salt, use herbs, spices, lemon, lime, plain vinegar and Dash seasoning blends to flavor food.

HERBS & SPICES HELP SLASH SODIUM INTAKE

Most of the sodium we consume in the U.S. comes from prepared meals and restaurants making it necessary to nix the salt shaker entirely. Use herbs and spices to boost flavor so you don't miss the salt. Bonus: herbs and spices can make healthier foods enticing so they are easier to enjoy more often!² The science supports the use of herbs and spices to lower sodium intake:

- In the SPICE randomized controlled trial, an intervention emphasizing spices and herbs significantly reduced sodium intake and had the potential to help people stick to lower sodium intakes.¹⁴
- In a 2019 study published in Nutrients, participants perceived low-salt chickpea and lentil dishes seasoned with herbs and spices to be just as palatable as those made with normal amounts of salt, making the use of herbs and spices a realistic strategy for the development of lower sodium, healthier versions of these foods.¹⁵
- In a 2017 study, participants with a higher preference for spices were found to have a lower salt intake and lower blood pressure when compared to those who disliked spicy foods. Those who enjoyed spicy foods also had a reduced preference for salt.¹⁶
- A 2014 study published in Appetite found that when adults were given 45% reduced sodium soup seasoned with herbs and spices (oregano, bay leaves, garlic and black pepper) they perceived it to be similar in saltiness to the regular sodium version of the soup.¹⁷
- In a study of Costa Rican adults, offering a variety of seasonings in healthful foods was linked to improvements in diet quality.¹⁸

CONSIDERATIONS FOR POTASSIUM

Potassium In Dash™ Seasoning Blends

Dash seasoning blends provide minimal or no amount of potassium into the diet, which can be beneficial for those who need to monitor or limit potassium intake. Dash seasoning blends do not contain potassium chloride as an ingredient. Some of the Dash seasoning blends may contain ingredients with naturally occurring minimal amounts of potassium. Please always refer to the label for the ingredient and nutrition information.

“Salt substitutes” often contain potassium when sodium chloride in table salt is partially replaced with potassium chloride. Although this added potassium can be beneficial in lowering blood pressure in certain people, for others, potassium intake must be strictly limited. Dash™ seasoning blends are not salt substitutes, do not contain potassium chloride as an ingredient and do not contribute significant amounts of potassium to the diet.

The generally accepted threshold for a high blood level of potassium, hyperkalemia, is ≥ 6.0 mmol/L. People with impaired potassium excretion are at greatest risk for hyperkalemia, and this includes those with chronic kidney disease, diabetes, severe heart failure, and those taking medications that may impair potassium excretion, such as NSAIDs and β -blockers.¹⁹

Yield: 4 servings

Ingredients

2 tbsp. extra-virgin olive oil, divided

1 tbsp. garlic, minced, divided (about 3 to 4 cloves)

4 tsp. Dash Original Seasoning Blend, divided

2 medium zucchinis, sliced thinly in half-moons (about 1 pound)

8 oz. pre-cooked spicy or sweet Italian chicken sausage, sliced thin

1 tsp. fresh lemon zest

3 tbsp. lemon juice (about 1 lemon)

1 ½ pounds uncooked shrimp, peeled and deveined—if frozen, defrosted and patted dry.

1 ½ tbsp. butter, cut into small cubes

Optional Garnish: fresh lemon wedges and fresh parsley, finely chopped

Directions

- 1. Preheat oven to 400°F. Mist a large sheet pan (or 2 standard size pans) liberally with olive oil spray and set aside.
- 2. In a medium bowl, mix 1 tbsp. olive oil, ½ tbsp. minced garlic, 2 tsp. Dash Original Seasoning Blend, zucchini, and sausage. Evenly spread it onto the prepared baking sheet(s) into one layer. Roast in the oven for about 15 minutes, or until veggies become soft and sausage starts to brown.
- 3. While veggies and sausage are roasting in the oven, prepare the marinade for shrimp: in a mixing bowl, combine the remaining olive oil, minced garlic, and Dash seasoning blend. Add the lemon zest and shrimp. Mix well. Let marinate for about 10 to 15 minutes.
- 4. When veggie and sausage reach the 15-minute mark in oven, remove sheet pan(s) and using tongs place the shrimp on the cooked veggies and sausage. Squeeze the lemon juice over everything and scatter on the butter cubes.
- 5. Roast for another 8 to 10 minutes or until shrimp turn pink. (Larger prawns will take about 10 to 12 minutes). Remove from oven and toss to mix around the lemony butter sauce. Serve immediately with fresh lemon wedges and parsley.
